Total Enrollment 780 As 240 Freshmen Enter

Breaking the tradition of the past years of having an increase in the freshman enrollment each year, this year's freshmen class is only 240 strong as opposed to an enrollment of 264 last year, and with an unusually large sophomore class the total enrollment has reached a record high of 780 students. This emphasizes the need for expansion.

These freshmen represent 28 secondary schools around the country and are not limited to the Baltimore area. However, all but ten of the frosh come from local high schools, with Loyola, Mount St. Joseph and Calvert Hall supplying the usual majority of students.

Freshmen Fair

The neophytes were first introduced to the campus through the program of student orientation conducted by the Wolf and Kettle Society, formerly the Academy of Student Orientation, followed by the "Join-a-Club" Fair which is held to promote interest in the many activities on campus.

In three weeks the freshmen initiation will formally come to an end with the annual "Freshman Welcome Dance" which is held by the sophomores who handled the freshmen orientation.

Four Added To Faculty

The new academic year sees the arrival of four new faculty members at Evergreen. The new faculty members are Mr. Leo J. O'Donovan, S.J., a Jesuit scholastic, Lt. Col. Joseph F. Dunn, Mr. Norman H. Hoegberg, and Mr. John T. Johnson.

New Scholastic

Mr. O'Donovan S.J. will teach Philosophy and Modern Languages. He was awarded a Danforth fellowship and was a Fulbright scholar at Lyons in 1957.

Lt. Col. Dunn is the new Professor of Military Science. He replaces Col. Kadick, who left Loyola to attend the National War College.

Princeton Grad

Mr. Hoegberg was the recipient of a Woodrow Wilson fellowship for 1959-1960, and was formerly an instructor at the University of Wisconsin while studying for his master's degree there. He did his undergraduate work at Princeton. Mr. Hoegberg is a member of the English department.

Mr. Johnson is assigned to the Mathematics department. He did graduate work at Johns Hopkins under a Gilman fellowship. Mr. Johnson formerly taught at St. Vincent's College, Latrobe, Pennsylvania.

With the addition of these four new faculty members, the total now rises to fifty-nine.

"My Three Angels" First Play Of Season

Tonight and tomorrow night, the Masque and Rapier Dramatics Society will present Sam and Bella Spewack's "My Three Angels" in Cohn Hall at 8:30 p.m. Tickets will be sold at the door for $1.50 per person or couple; however, freshmen and their dates will be admitted free upon presentation of their College Registration Card.

Comedy

The story is set in a penal colony in French Guiana. Three convict laborers have been engaged to repair the roof of Felix and Emilie Ducoutel. In the process of their work, they overhear all that goes on below. Sympathizing with the plight of the Ducoutel family, they decide to aid them in their distress. Operating as only convicts can, they solve all of the family problems. This is comedy at its best!

Stars

In the male lead, Ed Slawski stars as Joseph, one of the convicts. He is supported by Paul Montgomery, Dave Crocco, Rich Lawrence, Ron Yakaitis, Bill Jenkins, and Lex Bishop. In the female lead, Martha Monius, a Sophomore from Mt. St. Agnes, stars as Emilie Ducoutel. In supporting female roles are Mary O'Connell, a junior from Notre Dame and Stephanie Crocco, a graduate from Notre Dame. The play is being directed by John Synodinos.

Awards

On Saturday night, after the performance, awards will be given for last year's endeavors. These awards cover best actor in a starring role, best direction, and best set design. The judges are members of the faculty who have attended all of the plays. These awards will recall a highly successful year for the Society. Congratulations to all the winners!

Rector's Message

Dear Men of Loyola:

Once again the halls of Loyola College open wide their doors of welcome to you, and the faculty and administration receive you into the world of scholarly endeavor.

The educational program at Loyola College provides you with an exceptional means of perfecting your powers of intellect and will, as well as controlling and developing your emotional and physical potential. You need this training in Christian education to acquire the maturity for personal happiness. Moreover, the world situation, and especially the crisis in Berlin, requires the energies and dedication of men well disciplined in thought and decision-making and a knowledge and love of the human person.

It is the hope and prayer of the faculty that you will avail yourselves of this opportunity to the best of your abilities.

With good wishes and confident that you will have a successful collegiate career, I am

Sincerely in Our Lord,

Vincent F. Beatty, S.J.

Christmas Vacation: Two Days Longer?

To date, the 61-62 Student Council has been in session for eight hours. Requests from the Student Body have been heeded and the Dean of Men has been requested to replace the new beverage machines with the older models. Fr. Galvin has been asked to extend the Christmas Holiday to include Dec. 18 and 19 for the benefit of the student letter carriers. The faculty has been prompt and courteous in announcing test dates to avoid conflict, in compliance with a Council request. A request has been approved to purchase new stage curtains for Cohn Hall, and place abundant reading material in the Student Lounge.

Mascot for Evergreen

The most ingenious resolution accepted fully supports Joe France, editor of the Quarterly, in the procurement of a live greyhound as a mascot for Loyola.

The Loyola Seal

The Council has also undertaken a project to educate the Student Body as to the importance and tradition of the Loyola Seal and to prevent the disrespect shown the metal seal in the floor of the narthex of the Chapel by students continually treading on it.

The Council will meet again today at 10 A.M. in Xavier Lounge.

(L. to r.) G. Paul Montgomery, Ed Slawski and Dave Crocco in a scene from "My Three Angels" to be presented in Cohn Hall tonight and tomorrow night.

Editorials

Goals

With the return of classes this week, many students have set forth for themselves academic goals. Most likely the majority have aimed high; and hope that their trajectories will bring them, at least, average results. At the Fall Convocation we were addressed, and very impressively, concerning the importance of distinguishing "doing" from "playing." We should not confuse Father Quain's advice with the 'all work and no play' theory; but rather apply it, as is, to our individual intentions.

Allow us now to present the Greyhound's intended goals for the 1961-1962 school year. As the student newspaper of Loyola College, the Greyhound will try always and primarily to inform its readers concerning events held at and sponsored by the College; our editorial policy will be to discuss and criticize actions and events of prime importance to the students as students; and, all the students and faculty reserve the privilege of openly expressing their views concerning the student community in letters to the editors.

Of course, all is not 'fact' in the Greyhound; and possibly that which is claimed to be, often is not (as a weekly publication, accuracy is occasionally sacrificed for haste); humor (to the best of our ability) is always presented.

With regard to "do" and "play" the majority of the members enjoy the chaos and desperation. Only a few, those interested in journalism as a career, are working for professional edification.

In conclusion, let our attitude be adopted by others, namely: Initially, we strive for the best; eventually, we will, at least, suffice.

Welcome Frosh

Each year there appears on campus a strange group of individuals who are seemingly aloof from the spirit and activity on campus—these are the Freshmen. This is the wrong attitude for anyone to have, for these new students are in the process of making a decisive step in their life by choosing a college career, and are understandably reluctant to participate wholeheartedly in many activities. To lessen this feeling and promote better cooperation among the students, we of the Greyhound extend a sincere welcome to the Freshmen. We urge them to participate in at least one activity; and, thereby, continue the fine tradition of Loyola men through the years.

The Watchdog

Recently, our country has been made to witness one of the most infamous incidents of our times. The incident to which we are referring is one which has divided a once free city, and made it into a "possible future battleground." The scene in this city has been one of conflict and mass confusion, with enemy patrols facing each other across a border which seems almost non-existent. After repeatedly jeering and cursing one another, the enemy forces have gradually subsided, but each force is now in the process of re-arming itself for an all-out war which could take place by the end of next year. We must dedicate ourselves to the prevention of a further conflict at all costs. The solution lies with us. We must save Ocean City!

Congratulations are in order to George Ordóñez who has recently returned from a trip to Cuba. George informs us that the once expensive trip can now be made a lot more inexpensively by anyone who can afford a plane ticket to Philadelphia and a ten dollar pistol.

Every now and then, every individual has a lucky day; but, last Monday was tops in our book. We put a quarter into the Coke machine and not only got our fifteen cents change, but also found some soda in our foam. Someone in that company must be slipping up.

Ed Slawski is circulating rumors that he is planning a great money-making scheme. He needs volunteers to help him in his collection. Only people who have their own white robes and envelopes will be considered.

Campus Question

We Asked the Freshmen:

What did you think of the freshman orientation?

Tom Hutchinson:

I was disappointed when they announced that the History Academy had raffled movie tickets. I was sure that they would give us chances to win "Henry" Baynes, since he gave us such a fine exhortation to sing the alma mater.

Colin Delphi:

I thought that the orientation was pretty good. The fellow who was our guide showed us a room which he called the "game room." In it were a ping-pong table, paddles, but no balls.

Gerald Klunker:

When they announced that "beanies" were on sale for $2.75, I thought that I was getting a deal. I found out later that they were saying "pup-caps" and not "hub-caps," so that now I am in favor of our class going out to steal hub-caps next year.

Bob Quirk:

As far as I'm concerned, the orientation was a well planned and executed, except for one item which was the fact that the groups that toured the campus were too large. The men in the back couldn't hear what the guide was saying. I also noticed that there was a big "to-do" about the freshmen learning the alma Mater, but when the Glee Club sang it, they had to use a book.

Sticks and Stones

The greyhound, long-standing symbol of Loyola College, may soon cease to be merely a caricature on a poster, a name for the college paper, or the nickname of the school's athletic teams. For, barring unforeseen obstacles or complications in the purchasing process now in progress, Loyola College will, in the not too distant future, become the proud owner of its own live mascot.

The procurement of a mascot was suggested by Joe France, editor of the EVERGREEN QUARTERLY, at a meeting of the Student Council prior to the formal opening of school. It was decided that Mr. France should attempt to purchase a whip-pet, which would be paid for out of funds raised in a "name the dog" contest open to the student body. The contest would be run similarly to the U.M.O.C. contest, i.e., a fixed price per vote, with an unlimited number of votes allotted to each student. Any further expenses not covered by this fund would be met by the staff of the Quarterly from its ample budget. Care of the dog would also be entrusted to the Quarterly staff.

The purchase of a mascot should be matter of great interest to the student body, and is certainly worthy of comment. It is just one more indication of the steady forward progress and advancement being made by Loyola College. Evidently, then, this writer approves in principle of the purchase of a college mascot. However, he would like to offer a few sobering thoughts on the proposal adopted by the Student Council.

First of all, the mascot is to be, and rightly so, the mascot of the entire school. Therefore, the student body as a whole should have been consulted as to the kind of mascot to be purchased, the method of raising the purchase price, and the responsibility of caring for it once purchased. The student body of Loyola College was consulted on none of these points. Instead, they learn upon their return to the campus that prior to the opening of school, a measure was rushed--perhaps railroaded might be a better term--through the Council and practically the whole affair thrown into the laps of the Quarterly staff. Some skeptical quarters might go so far as to say that the mascot should be rightly called the mascot of the Quarterly rather than of Loyola College. For the sake of all concerned, this writer hopes that the students will magnanimously look upon the planned arrangement as a generous gesture on the part of Mr. France and his staff. If they do not, the consequences may be hard felt. For the Council is relying on the support of the entire student body in the name the dog contest. They are asking the student body to support out of their own pockets a fund raising campaign which should be of interest to them, but about which they had no opportunity to voice their opinions. This will require a tremendous amount of school spirit on the part of the students. This writer feels that the Student Council should have reasonably assured themselves of the existence of this spirit before plunging themselves headlong into the affair of the school mascot. Their failure to do so is no small oversight on their part. For, quite frankly, this writer has not seen during his tenure at the college enough evidence to convince him that the student body has this needed spirit. He sincerely hopes he is wrong. He hopes that the students of Loyola College prove him wrong beyond a doubt by wholeheartedly supporting the purchase of a mascot and the fund raising campaign. If they do, Mr. France and his Quarterly staff may have enough money left in their ample budget to buy the dog a green sweater and a pipe, and then they can spend their time teaching him to lean back and smoke it. If not--well, a mascot is supposed to bring good luck. They may need it.

Fr. Quain Speaks At Convocation

Last Friday the second annual Fall Honors Convocation was held in the gymnasium. Father Vincent F. Beatty S.J. presided and Father Edwin A. Quain S.J., professor of classics at Fordham University and director of the Fordham University Press was the guest speaker.

Since he entered the Society of Jesus in 1924, Father Quain has taught at Georgetown Prep and was dean of the Fordham Graduate School from 1951 to 1953. Aside from his other activities, he is presently editor of Traditio, a journal of studies in ancient and medieval history, thought, and religion.

Pursuit of Excellence

Stressing the importance of a correct attitude toward collegiate success, Father Quain warned against formulating an indifferent attitude toward distinctive scholarship. He also advised that the true purpose of education is to increase one's knowledge throughout the unending pursuit of academic excellence.

Father Quain's address was well-received by the student body. The address introduced the year on a serious note.

Fr. Edwin A. Quain, S.J.

Cage Tourney Tops Sports Card

GREYHOUND SPORTS

by Tom Kenney

Once in a while, someone will come up with an idea which looks better and better the more you think about it. Such an idea is the proposal by Mr. Lefty Reitz that Loyola hold an Invitational Basketball Tournament.

The Tourney seems beneficial to all concerned. As Lefty points out, it will aid the Hound Courtmen by filling in the long holiday layoff which has made many a Green and Gray squad a little rusty. Playing against solid tournament competition won't hurt the Hound cagers a bit either.

The Loyola fans will benefit also by being afforded the opportunity of seeing their own quintet performing in a tournament.

The Publicity from the tourney will surely benefit the College and the other teams involved. The French National Team alone is a cinch to make headlines wherever it travels in the U.S.A.

However, the above mentioned benefits to the team, fans and college are all tangible ones which will be realized this year. To this writer, another benefit comes to the fore, intangible now but perhaps the biggest one of all in a few years. Lefty Reitz has taken a big step forward in promoting a sports activity during the Christmas holidays.

Sportswise, Baltimore is a pretty dead town during late December. Pro basketball and ice hockey are gone. The Colts may possibly be playing for the N.F.L. title but who knows now?

The point is Lefty has had an idea which could grow to such proportions as to benefit all Baltimore. Without making rash predictions, it is still possible that this tournament, expanded and well organized could fill Baltimore's December sports void. The Civic Center authorities have already inquired about the event.

Athletic Director Lefty Reitz is this year's soccer coach due to the retirement of Tommy Lind.

Loyola booters warm up as soccer team prepares to meet Towson, October 3.

Soccer And X-Country Openers Set For Oct. 3

Intramural Items

Intramural Director, Nappy Doherty, has lined up another full slate of intramural sports for the coming year. It will include: Touch football, Tennis Singles matches, Bowling, Basketball, Swimming, and Softball. He has announced that the deadline for entries in the touch football, tennis, and bowling competitions will be today, Friday, Sept. 22nd, with play getting under way on the 27th of September.

Touch Football

The touch football play will be a double elimination tournament with all games being played on Wednesdays at 1 p.m. and Fridays at 10 a.m. on the athletic field. The only request for players is that all members of a single team must be from the same graduating class. However, members of different sections within that class may play on the same team.

On The Courts

On the tennis scene, a single elimination tournament will be held in singles matches. No doubles matches have been scheduled, but if enough requests are received, they will be held.

Bowling Action

Bowling league entries may be either individual or teams, and will be handled on a handicap basis. Teams do not need members from the same section or graduating class. Bowling will be at the Guilford Lanes, which are located in the 4200 block of York Road.

With the opening meet of the season a mere eleven days away, Coach Bill McElroy is still searching for a first seven for his under-manned harriers.

The team, striving to regain its winning ways of seasons past, is led by returning Mason-Dixon champ Rick Frampton. Last season as a freshman Frampton was undefeated in collegiate competition. Along with Frampton and senior team captain Lou Smith, a trio of juniors--Tom Kenny, Hank McGraw, and Bill Jenkins--have the inside track for the first five starting berths.

Sparse Underclass Turnout

Jockeying for the remaining top positions are a number of sophomores from last year's squad including Paul Plack, Mike Kenny, and Tony Ryan, and Newcomers Wil Turk and Dan Leubecker.

The great disappointment to the coach has been the poor turnout of the freshman class. So far only two or three freshmen out of a class of 240 have come out for the team.

Booters Getting Set

Loyola's soccer team has been working hard in preparation for its October 3 home opener with the teachers from Towson. The booters will be led this season by their senior co-captains, Jim Kennedy and Charley "Animal" Graham. It is still too early to tell how the young Hound squad will fare in this season's competition. Many starting posts have not yet been determined. However hopes are high that the booters will be in the thick of the title fight.

Lefty Reitz takes over as coach this year due to the retirement of Tommy Lind.

Loyola Hosts New Event

Athletic Director Lefty Reitz announced today that there will be a glittering new addition to the Loyola sports calendar for this year. On the nights of December 29th and 30th, in the Evergreen gym, the Hounds will play host to the first Loyola Invitational Basketball Tournament. Besides the home Green and Gray five, the University of Delaware, Muhlenburg College, and the French National team, Alsace De Bagnolet, will perform in the gala event.

Schedule As Follows

Delaware will face Muhlenburg in the opening game at 7:30 P.M. on the 29th, while the Hounds will take on the visitors from France in the 9:15 P.M. second contest. On Saturday night, the 30th, the third place game will go off at 7:30 and the finale for the championship will follow at 9:15.

New Coach

While on the subject of basketball, this season marks the debut of Ed "Nap" Doherty as the Hounds'

Ed (Nap) Doherty, who succeeds Lefty Reitz as the Hound basketball coach, co-captained Loyola's last M-D Tourney champs in '53. Nap is also the director of intermural athletics.

new cage mentor. "Nappy" succeeds Lefty Reitz, who retired last year after guiding Loyola's basketball fortunes for twenty-three years. The new coach is no stranger to the Loyola system. Besides assisting Lefty for the past four years, "Nappy" had an illustrious hard-court career at Evergreen. During his three years on the Hound Varsity, "Nap" notched 1101 points and was twice named to the All-Maryland and All Mason-Dixon squads. In '53, he co-captained Loyola's last M.-D. Tourney champs.

As head coach Nappy faces a tough rebuilding job. The key operatives from last Year's team, which won only five games, have graduated. However, with some hard work and promising new faces, Nap hopes to get Loyola basketball back to its winning ways.
